Continuation of 11. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: Applicant's arguments filed March 7, 2006 with respect to claims 1-10 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. The prior art (JP '928) discloses a removable support member (left side of Fig. 2;) that comprises an inner annular portion (at the rightmost portion of 2) that supports at its inner radial periphery the damper mechanism both axially and radially. Also, the support member includes a radially outward extending portion (adjacent the end of the arrow for reference numeral 29), and an axially extending portion (denoted by reference numeral 46). Therefore, it is believed that the prior art anticipated the limitations of claims 1-10. Regarding applicant's argument regarding claims 11-38, applicant's argumentshave been fully considered and are persuasive. Of particular significance are the limitations of the first and second member supporting both ends of the first spring. Also, the detachable relationship of the axially extending portions with the first member is thought to be of patentable significance. Then, the prior art rejection of those claims has been withdrawn..
